Minden cuts ambulance service

by Russ Duhaime

The future status of the Haliburton County Ambulance Service is in question now that Minden has decided to relinquish control.

"It's up in the air until we meet with the municipality," said Rick Armstrong, Regional Manager of Emergency Health Services. Any number of changes to the service may result if the Ministry of Health is unable to iron out an agreement that will satisfy Minden's concerns.

The ambulance service is currently managed by the municipality. However, tightened purse strings at the ministry level are making it impossible for Minden to continue to provide the present level of service without incurring a debt.

Council notified the ministry at the end of April that it wishes to relinquish control. However, council is still awaiting a reply from Assistant Deputy Minister Michael Ennis regarding a meeting to discuss the issue.

In a press release issued last week, Minden Council says that operation of the service has become extremely difficult and demanding, particularly in these times of fiscal restraint. "By relinquishing our responsibilities for the operation of the ambulance service, we are confident that we will continue to be in a position to give proper focus and attention to the other important matters we must deal with."

Armstrong would not speculate on what might happen once management duties are transferred from the municipality. He expects a meeting will be arranged soon, when the ministry will try to resolve the problems so Minden can continue to manage the service.

Ironing out the problems, though, may not be an easy task. According to Minden Reeve Bern Berry, the funding provided by the ministry is inadequate. The municipality has been instructed to operate the service with a one per cent increase. To accomplish this, the ministry has advised that "innovative and imaginative" methods be employed, said Berry.

Faced with such a small budget increase, the reeve fears that Minden ratepayers would end up picking up the shortfall. The ambulance service in Toronto is "heavily subsidized" by the city, says Berry, "and it seems that we were going in that direction."

Berry says it's not fair to tax Minden residents for a county-wide service that is supposed to be funded by the province.

If no agreement can be reached, management of the service can take on a variety of forms. The options include alignment with another service, management by the ministry or management by a private manager. Alternately, an interim manager could be considered, said Armstrong.

"This was not an easy decision," said Berry. However, it was taking up more and more of the time of council and the township's administrative staff. He said the possibility of giving up control has been considered a number of times in the past. In fact, Berry says it was addressed in each of his three terms on Minden Council and the decisions to continue at the time were never unanimous.

Berry believes there are advantages to having the service managed by the municipality. "You're closer to what happens, know what is needed and can hire local people as much as possible. The advantages of hiring local people are that they are available for emergency calls and they know the county, which is important for optimum response times."

Berry said he does not know how council's decision will affect the service. However, he said council is willing to work with the ministry to make the transition as smooth as possible.

Put it Out

The kids at CHACE Place in Minden learned all about the dangers of forest fires and a bit about how Ministry of Natural Resources Firefighters put them out when staff from the Haliburton fire centre visited last week. Learning to use a portable pump was just part of the fun. The main attraction was the presence of Smokey The Bear (see page 5 for a photo).

Minden council's budget increases 2.2 per cent

by Russ Duhaime

Minden council has managed to "hold the line" with their 1993 budget which shows a municipal tax increase of just 2.2 per cent.

Minden ratepayers will be paying 4.9 per cent more in taxes once the county and education taxes are rolled in.

While presenting the new budget Thursday, Finance Committee chairman Jerry Rome expressed his appreciation for the work done by the various departments on their budget requirements. He said everyone is very optimistic the budget is workable. He said everyone is understanding of the need for restraint, and although there are few major projects slated for the year, there will be no staff cuts.

"We wish to express our thanks to all municipal staff and department manager, who not only provided AHM with excellent results for 1991, but also at the request of council, assisted in the presentation of 'hold the line, but realistic' departmental budgets for 1992."

To establish the overall tax rates, county and education taxes are combined with the municipal levy. For Minden, the county mill rate is dropping by 1.6 per cent, the education levy is rising by 7.8 per cent and the municipal levy is up 2.2 per cent for an overall tax hike of 4.9 per cent.

The education levy accounts for 58.5 per cent of the tax bills while the county takes 10.9 per cent and the municipality gets 30.6 per cent.

The only project of note to be undertaken this year is for the construction of a new sand dome for the roads department sand and salt. The cost of this project will be $167,000 of which 50 per cent will be covered by a Ministry of Transportation supplementary grant.

Earlier in Thursday's meeting council members expressed their surprise that the ministry's grant for this project was approved. Rome said the dome will be extremely beneficial environmentally because it will reduce the amount of salt escaping from the site. He said it will also allow roads employees more flexibility in scheduling their time to work at the yard.

Rome also made note of a concession made by roads department employees in helping to keep labour costs to a minimum. He said they voluntarily agreed to accept time off in lieu of overtime, rather than taking overtime pay. Rome said this translates into a big savings for the department and the municipality.

While there are few new projects on the go, neither will there be any cutbacks in the level of road maintenance in the municipality. The current standard of road maintenance has been built Spray program's last year?

MNR will not be spraying crown lands this year

by Andy Holloway

The future of Ontario's Gypsy moth spraying programs will be up in the air once the current round of spraying is over, says the coordinator of Haliburton's program.

Andy Paul says a contract which allows municipalities to spray for the insect expires when this spring's spraying is over later this week. At that time the Ministry of Natural Resources will not have any involvement with the program.

However, Paul says whether a spray program will be continued by the county "really depends on the politicians here."

Paul adds "it's too premature to say what will happen."

On February 13, Natural Resources Minister Bud Wildman announced the government was pulling out of the Gypsy moth spray program saying the $3.8 million the program costs would be better spent on "higher-priority initiatives in its forestry programs."

The announcement caused concern among the municipalities and the aerial contractors who do the spraying. Because the move was so sudden the ministry then entered into a one year contract for allowing the areas to continue its spray programs. The areas were Haliburton, Hastings, Peterborough and Parry Sound.

Although the ministry is no longer funding the programs, it is paying for the administrative costs of the program. More importantly, says Paul, the ministry has taken over the issues of authority and liability from the county.

Ministry official Gary Clements says municipalities do not have the right to conduct aerial spraying under the Municipal Act.

Therefore for this year, the ministry has granted the four areas permission to conduct an aerial spray program.

In addition, Clements says if anything goes wrong with the spraying, the ministry is now ultimately responsible for the damage and any costs arising from that damage.

Paul says about 850 people in Haliburton County applied to have their areas sprayed, an increase of 150 over last year despite a rise in fees.

Last year, when the ministry was co-funding the program, spraying one acre cost a landowner $6. This year, the initial fee is a flat $60 for the first three acres followed by a sliding scale of $15, $10, and $1 per acre.

For example, if a landowner had 100 acres to spray it would cost $655 which breaks down as follows: $60 for the first three, $15 per acre for the fourth through 15th acre, $10 per acre up to 50 acres and $1 for each acre after 50. Last year the same 100 acres would have cost $600.

The large number of applicants for the program would seem to indicate there is still widespread concern about the damage Gypsy moths can do to trees.

However, Clements says the government is not spraying crown lands for the insect this year because it has found the Gypsy moth has not caused as much damage as expected.

"When we first heard about the Gypsy moth everyone was upset and worried that it would devastate everything. But it really hasn't done the damage we thought it would," says Clements.

Clements says there were also economic factors involved in the ministry's decision not to spray this year. As well, it's doubtful whether the ministry will ever spray for the moth, but Clements says that issue is decided on a yearly basis.

The spray used to kill the Gypsy moth, which defoliates forests when it is in its caterpillar stage, is a biological insecticide called Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) and is a naturally occurring virus.

Bt is activated when dissolved in an alkaline environment, like a caterpillar's stomach. Recent research indicates the virus does not harm humans or animals when ingested.

"That's the great thing about Bt," says Clements. "Bt is only restricted to caterpillars. Any caterpillar that eats it will die. The spray won't kill flies, bees or any other insect."

One possible result of the government's pull-out from the program could see private landowners creating their own spray programs. They would then be free to use any available insecticide that is approved by the ministry of the environment. Bt is considered the best, but it is expensive so cheaper, less efficient chemical sprays could be used.

However, any private aerial spray program has to have the approval of the M.O.E. For a municipality to conduct a program, the Municipal Act would have to be rewritten to allow aerial spraying.

Gypsy moth larvae are also responsible for carrying histamine which causes hay fever and allergies.

This year's spray is being done by Pegasus Helicopters and will start this week depending on weather conditions. An aerial survey was done last week in preparation of the spray.

"When we first heard about the Gypsy moth everyone was upset and worried ...but it really hasn't done the damage we thought it would"

Modest increase

into the new budget.

The same holds true for the other municipal departments. No major projects are planned, but existing programs and services will continue as in the past.

Another point of interest pointed out at the meeting is the fact that council is not taking any increase in remuneration for the year.

Rome also mentioned that any unpaid taxes pose an additional burden to any municipality. Regardless of whether taxes are collected from ratepayers, the municipality has to turn over a set amount to the school board and county.

The budget, with a comparison to last year, is as follows:

Club 35 reopens

by Andy Holloway

A new and improved Club 35 reopened its doors to the delight of about 35 local residents last weekend as 90-year-old resident Edith Russell snipped the ceremonial ribbon.

The community centre in Halls Lake underwent major renovations. A new fully stocked kitchen has been added and the lower level is now completely underground allowing easier access onto the main floor of the building. New bathrooms were also installed.

The 834 square feet addition cost $162,000 with the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation kicking in $83,430 of that sum.

Councillor Murray Daniels, praised the people who donated their time to get the project completed.

"It's been a long hard struggle to get the club renovated, but it's been worth it," said Daniels.

The original building was built in 1952 on land donated by William and Amy Cooper. Russell is the sister of Amy Cooper. The forerunner to Club 35 started in 1947 when a group of people met, to socialize and play cards, at various houses.

Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardner said the original Club 35 had been built by volunteers and the building supplies were given free by residents of the area. Gardner reminisced about his times in the hall with Russell, but said it's people who make the centre a joy.

"This hall's been a lot of fun over the years, but it's the people who make it great," said Gardner.

Daniels said the centre had to wait an extra year to get a government grant because it thought Club 35 was discriminatory. The Ministry of Tourism and Recreation thought the name Club 35 meant only people over the age of 35 could use the club. Daniels said once the government realized the club was named after Highway 35, which is the only road access, the grant was approved.

Just before inviting everyone into the club for food and refreshment Daniels said, "These doors are always open so if you want to come in and play cards you're more than welcome."

Club 35 in Halls Lake reopened its doors last Saturday (May 23). On hand to cut the ceremonial ribbon were from left: Alex Stevenson, Stanhope Councillor Murray Daniels, Edith Russell, Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardner and Bill Cowan. Russell is the sister of Amy Cooper, who donated the land in 1952, on which Club 35 sits.

Sno-fest coming

by Russ Duhaime

Thousands of snowmobilers from across the province may be coming to Haliburton County for one weekend of action and events this winter.

Ontario's largest snowmobile festival — Snowfest '93 — is coming to the Highlands at a date yet to be established.

The Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs voted May 23 in favour of accepting the Haliburton County Snowmobile Club's bid to host the event. The 58,000 member OFSC will be using every avenue of support to promote and participate in the prestigious event.

"Snowfest '93 will bring millions of dollars into the local economy and will give winter tourism a real boost," says HCSA president Brian Watts.

Bringing Snowfest to the Highlands underscores just how dedicated the HCSA is to promoting tourism in the county, says Watts.

The HCSA receives little benefit from the event. In fact, it will require a tremendous amount of work for the 33 women and men who run the HCSA. "I'm very proud of the attitude which the HCSA continues to demonstrate toward tourism and business in Haliburton."

According to Watts, the HCSA and Haliburton businesses owe a debt of gratitude to HCSA past president Peter Overington. Overington, who now serves as vice president of the OFSC and chairs its safety and environment committee, presented Haliburton's bid to the board on behalf of the HCSA. Overington was very successful in helping Haliburton achieve this goal in the face of stiff competition from other tourist areas.

The date for Snowfest will be finalized by July 1. However, Watts says the last weekend in January or the first weekend in February are what the HCSA is pushing for.

Some of the events already posted for Snowfest will include a giant poker run, family rides, a women only ride, obstacle races for the entire family, non-stop radar runs, all-day cookouts and welcome reception and a huge Snowfest party.

The HCSA will also be hosting a "Ride in Challenge" to encourage clubs to ride to Haliburton.

"We hope to post a bounty which will be awarded to the trail fund of the club which registers the most members at local tourist resorts," says Watts.

Against Our Will Is Against The Law.

If you're like most people, you'll look at this and think rape.

Well, think again.

Because sexual assault isn't only rape. It's any unwanted act of a sexual nature imposed by one person on another.

And if you think it's always a dark alley and a violent stranger, you're wrong again.

More than half of all sexual assaults of women are committed by men they know.

It can occur on a date. Between friends. Even between husband and wife.

So most people don't think of it as a crime. And often it goes unreported. But attitudes must change.

Because against our will is against the law.

If your life has been affected by sexual assault, find out what can be done. Contact a sexual assault service. Or talk to someone you trust.

Men must understand that sexual assault is a crime.

Maybe then they'll think twice about it.

Large haul in Snowdon

During the week of May 18 to 24, officers of the Minden OPP detachment investigated numerous incidents and six traffic accidents with three people injured.

Snowdon Township - a red Honda four-wheel ATV, a silver propane powered Honda generator, an orange McCulloch generator with gas powered motor, a Stihl chainsaw, a Valmet over and under 12 gauge shot gun, a .22 calibre Stevens Savage semi automatic with a Weaver scope, four five-inch hunting knife with stag horn handle, ammunition and two pairs of Bushnell binoculars.

Police briefs

Aggressive driving

Aggressive driving is defined as speeding, failure to yield right of way, improper lane changes, improper passing and disobeying traffic signs and signals.

Next to cancer, motor vehicle collisions kill more people under the age of 40 in Ontario than anything else. Estimates are that someone dies in a road collision in Ontario every seven hours; someone is injured about every 4.5 minutes. Regardless of your driving ability, there is a 50-50 chance you will be in a collision during your lifetime.

A study of drivers in collisions found no difference in aggressive driving between northern and southern Ontario. Police judged that about two thirds of all drivers at fault in collisions in both regions had been driving aggressively. More than half the convictions found on driving records were for speeding.

The sex of the driver has little to do with aggressive attitude; male and female were involved in aggressive driving collisions almost equally.

Police will crack down hard on aggressive drivers. They want drivers to be reminded of the consequences of this behaviour in terms of costs for personal injury, vehicle damage and lost time, as in traffic slowdowns.

Hugs and kisses were doled out freely to Smokey the Bear when he paid a visit to CHACE Place last week. During the visit, the kids were also treated to a slide presentation and demonstration of equipment from Ministry of Natural Resources firefighters.

Crime of the week

During the early morning hours of Saturday March 7, 1992, four Haliburton businesses were entered by an unknown person.

The IGA, Legion, Curling Club and Arena were all entered using a pry bar. Damage to these places is estimated at over $2,000. Stolen during the break-ins was more than $400 in cash.

If you have any information about this or any other crime, call Lindsay Crimestoppers at 1-800-563-TIPS (8477). You will never be asked to reveal your identity or to testify in court. If your information leads to an arrest Lindsay Crimestoppers will pay up to $1,000 in cash.

Dorset police station burns

by Andy Holloway

One week after the Dorset community police station was officially opened, it caught fire and burned to the ground.

Last Sunday, around 4 a.m., a Dorset resident noticed the police station was on fire and called the Dorset Fire Department. However, the building was destroyed by the fire.

The Ontario Fire Marshall and Minden O.P.P. are still investigating the cause of the blaze. At press time, Minden police said there are still no leads on the cause of the fire and that nothing has been ruled out, including arson. However, police earlier said there was no fault with the electrical system.

The fire caused $30,000 worth of damage and only the frame of the building was left standing.

The new police station was part of an ongoing provincial plan to increase police visibility in small communities and promote public relations. Minden received its police station under the same plan last year.

The building used to be a rink shack and had been remodeled at a cost of $6,000. Most of the labour and materials had been donated by Dorset area residents.

Editorial

There is little question that Minden Council's decision to relinquish control of the county ambulance service is correct, but the ramifications of this move will likely be troublesome unless the Ministry of Health is willing to take over.

Minden is correct to bail out of a program that appears to have mounting financial and administrative costs. It is difficult or impossible to justify the requirement for Minden residents to bolster a county-wide service. At the same time, though, we do not recommend the county assume the burden, since we believe the costs should be borne entirely by the province.

The ministry sets the standards for emergency health care, negotiates wage settlements with employees and establishes the budgets. These are the key controls necessary to effectively manage any service or business, controls that are absent under the current system. These controls will continue to be absent from the management duties unless the ministry assumes the responsibility for managing our ambulance service.

It is scary to think of what might happen to our service under new management. The ministry may grant the management responsibilities to a private operator or amalgamate it with a neighbouring service. In either case, the new management will have to find "innovative and creative" methods of turning a profit, which undoubtedly will result in reduced service.

In this scenario, we can complain to the management that we are unhappy with the service and they will shrug it off as ministry underfunding. On the other hand we could express our complaints to the ministry and they will shrug them off on the management.

The only palatable option now that Minden is giving up the service is for the ministry to assume management duties. The ministry has control of the purse strings and must be held accountable for maintaining a certain standard of service.

We do not want a new middleman. Nor can we accept any reduction in service.

Astrology can't get no respect

Astrology: the study that assumes and attempts to interpret the influence of heavenly bodies on human affairs.

Richard: What's your sign?

Victoria: I'm sorry, it's unlisted.

Mel Brooks, High Anxiety

Poor old astrology. It's kind of the Rodney Dangerfield of the pseudo-science — it can't get no respect. The Church pooh poohs it. Engineers sneer and academics roll their eyes and scientist laugh up their lab coat sleeves at it.

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

And don't ever make the mistake (as I once did) of asking an astronomer whether he believed in astrology.

I had no idea that a learned man of science would even know the kind of words that came out of his mouth. Astronomers consider themselves to be the only legitimate students of stars. They think astrology is to astronomy as Randy Macho Man Savage is to Greco-Roman wrestling.

Astronomers believe that astrology gives their science a bad name and they would like all the astrologers of the world to stop writing their drivelly but lucrative magazine and newspaper columns, fold up their Signs of the Zodiac charts and become parking lot attendants.

Me? Well, I'm not as vehement about it as the AF of L CIO Astronomers Union, but I have to confess I think astrology's a bit of a scam.

I find it a real strain on credibility to believe that the oscillation of the third moon of Betelgeuse is going to have a measurable effect on my love life next Wednesday afternoon.

The bizarre world of blips and bumps

Everybody's talking about the bump up ahead
You can see it in the road, there's a bump up ahead
Whoa Ho, Whoa Ho, that's all right
—David Wilcox, "Bump Up Ahead"

Contrary to David Wilcox's funky little number, it's a rare occurrence when you can see the bump up ahead and that's definitely not all right.

On a recent drive along Highway 11 into Ontario's north, to where the Polar Bear Run starts, I noticed a funny thing about road bumps. Wherever there was a bump in the highway, a neat yellow sign with a rough road symbol and the word "Bump" would appear. Not before the bump to give motorists a warning, but right at the bump.

In the words of many a cheap generic comic, "Who were the people who came up with this campaign?"

By the time you realize the sign says "Bump", you have already passed the bump and given a rather rude jolt to your car's, and your own, underbody.

Sure it could be argued, and no doubt the Ministry of Transportation does, the signs are large enough to alert motorists to the fast approaching bump and at high noon on a sunny day the M.T.O. is probably right. And once in a while there actually is a "Bump up ahead" warning.

But it seems the only time a "Bump up ahead" sign is displayed before a bump is when the bump is really more of a blip. So why doesn't the sign say "Blip up ahead" instead?

Granted, the word "blip" doesn't strike much fear into the hearts of men, women, children and beasts. It's hard to picture the family putting newspaper over their heads to protect themselves from an oncoming blip. Harder still, to imagine someone heeding the advice of a blip sign to actually slow down for a blip.

More like, "Hey honey, here comes one of those little blips in the road the Ontario travel guide told us about."

"Yep, you were right, cute little critters ain't they? Let's take a picture to show the folks back home."

However, if you're driving along at night, doing the speed limit and curving up a sheer cliff, there's not a lot of laughs when there really is a bump immediately after the curve when there's no warning given. Add a large truck with bright Halogen headlights coming the other way, stir in some rain and you have a recipe for disaster.

The truck passes, blinding you for what seems like eons, but is probably only a second, and the next thing you know you hit a bump. Looking in the rear view mirror you notice a diamond shaped sign that could have said "Bump."

It makes sense then that the placement of the "Bump" sign should be in advance of the actual bump itself to give motorists a chance to slow down and ease their car over the bump rather than having to hit it at full force.

In one particularly nasty incident, I went camping in Killarney Provincial Park two summers ago. On the ride up, there were four people in the car and the one in the passenger seat was given the job of alerting the driver when the next bump or curve was coming up. It was about midnight, miles from anywhere of any significance, when we missed a curve sign and narrowly making the corner missed the oncoming "Bump" sign.

It was just our luck that it happened to be a six-inch-bump, definitely not a blip, with a foot drop on the other side. We cursed quite loudly as our heads hit the roof of the car and we're forced to stop because our transmission was gone.

We all laugh about it now after a few beers and the locals found it amusing at the time, but it sure wasn't funny to us then. All it would have taken to avoid the hundreds of dollars it took to repair the damage was a simple "Bump Up Ahead" sign.

No protection for taxis

Editor:

Re: taxi business

Council should study how the taxi business is regulated in other communities. The present uncertainty of council on this issue leaves the taxi owners no protection.

If everyone who has a car decided to put in on the road as a taxi, the present owners would soon be out of business.

If the taxi service is operated without meters, then there should be a system of zones to base trip charges on.

There should also be a regular check of cleanliness and mechanical fitness. That is what the licensing fee helps to pay for.

Two taxis in this town is the maximum required for the population.

Having owned my own taxi for 40 years, I know the business. I am still financially involved in the business in Hamilton, and am now a permanent resident in the Minden area.

I have no axe to grind, I just hate to see this situation get out of control.

Besides, the whole idea of astrology is betrayed by a fatal flaw.

Jerks. Every day I run into all kinds of jerks. Some times it's individual jerks. It can be jerks in pairs. I have encountered jerks in flocks of three, five — even a dozen or more.

And yet they have no sign. The much-vaunted astrological zodiac does not provide a sign for jerks.

Oh sure, the Zodiac will say that Taureans are "stubborn" and Librans are "dreamers". I am not talking about stubbornness and dreaminess. I am talking about the pig-ignorant, moronic, mean-spirited psychopaths and bozos that dot this planet like fruit flies on a day-old danish and make each day an obstacle course of broken-field running for the rest of us.

What's their sign?

This is not a new rant for me, which may explain the sheet of paper I found under my office door this morning. A new interpretation of the zodiac. No date, no address, author unknown.

It's a cheap and vicious piece of writing and I like it very much. Here's a sample:

LEO — July 23-Aug 22: "You consider yourself a born leader. Others think that you are pushy. Most Leo people are bullies. You are vain and dislike honest criticism. Your arrogance is disgusting. Leo people are born thieves."

You a Capricorn? Then this Scud's for you: "You are conservative and afraid of taking risk. You don't do much of anything and are lazy. There has never been a Capricorn of any importance. Capricorns should avoid standing too long, as they tend to take root and become trees."

Grossly unfair perhaps, but a refreshing change from all that kissy-face good news stuff you usually see in astrology columns.

My sign? Well, I'm a Virgo, if you must know, but wh...

Oh. You want to see what Mister Anonymous Astrologer had to say about my sign? Well, it can't do any harm I suppose.

Virgo — Aug. 23 - Sept. 23: "You are the logical type and hate disorder. This nit-picking is sickening to your friends. You are cold and unemotional and some times fall asleep while making love."

I certainly don't find much humour in that one.

On the other hand, my wife still hasn't stopped laughing.

Shooting for the top

Burnt River's Linda Szulga takes aim

by Jerry Grozelle

It's a good thing Linda Szulga is self-employed. It's doubtful that she would be able to juggle a 9 to 5 job and her passion for competitive shooting.

Bill Szulga, Linda's husband, had no idea that his wife would take to the shooting sports so enthusiastically when he suggested she try it to relieve the stress of a high pressure job. That was in 1985 and this year she competed with the Canadian National team at the World Cup in Mexico City and Los Angeles over a two-week span.

Linda found that shooting did have a calming effect on her nerves. "When I'm shooting, I forget about everything else," she said.

She started shooting in the Metro Toronto League as a recreational shooter. But she soon found that shooting competitively was more to her liking. With her sights settled on the competitive end, Szulga discovered that shooting once a week wasn't enough.

Starting from a nerve-calming hobby in 1985, Szulga advanced to the point where she was ready to test her skills against other shooters from across the country in 1988. That year, she went to Granby, Quebec to compete at her first national event, where she won the ladies' championship. It was there where she drew the attention of Bruce Wilkins, who is the head coach for the national rifle shooting team. He took her under his wing and has been coaching her ever since.

Wilkins convinced her to change to a different rifle, one more suited to international competition. She tried different models of Walther and Anschutz rifles before settling on the ones she now uses in competition. Three rifles make up her arsenal. Szulga shoots the .22 calibre sporter competitions, which are restricted to rifles weighing eight pounds or less, with an Anschutz Model 190. For serious competition, in which rifles can weigh from 10 to 16 pounds, she uses another Anschutz, a Model 2013. Her competition air rifle is a Model 2002 Anschutz in .177 calibre. All are equipped with aperture-type competition sights.

Szulga's best score to date for three positions is 549 out of 600. To put that score into perspective, the world record for three positions is in the high 580s. (Competitive shooting consists of three positions; prone, kneeling and off-hand.)

A year after competing in Granby she tried out for the Canadian National team. She didn't make the grade in 1989 but in 1990 she joined the ranks of Canada's elite, setting the stage for a trip to the World Cup, held in Mexico City and Los Angeles a few weeks ago. Szulga's team came home with a silver medal in prone and a bronze in the three-position event.

During the World Cup, the 38-year-old Burnt River resident suffered torn shoulder tendons, a painful stress-related condition that prevented her from finishing the competition. The injury will likely keep her from shooting at the provincial match in Kitchener at the end of June but she hopes to be recovered in time to take part in the national event in Sudbury late in August. In the meantime, she is making a couple of trips a

Along with her shooting, Szulga has become very involved in the administration end of the sport. Provincially, she is helping to assemble and organize an Ontario team of men and women. There hasn't been an active provincial team for about five years, so they are basically starting from scratch. There will be three divisions: senior, junior and ladies.

Nationally, Szulga is helping to develop a structure for teaching and evaluating Canadian coaching certification courses. She will be attending the Coaching Association's Trainer's Conference in Ottawa, where she will conduct two half-day seminars.

"I would like to take some of the skills I've learned and pass them on," she said.

In an average year of shooting, Szulga will burn up about 10,000 rounds of .22 calibre ammunition, including practice and competition. That doesn't count the air rifle shooting. The five foot two inch master shooter can often be found at one of the clubs where she practises, namely the Peterborough Fish and Game Club or with the Haliburton County Marksmen. She also has a well-equipped 10-metre indoor air rifle range in the basement of her home.

One wall of the Szulga's basement is covered with dozens of plaques and trophies that both she and husband Bill have won.

Linda competes in an average of 15 to 20 events a year, most of which are club or provincial/state competitions. Szulga is a member of several organizations, including the Ontario Smallbore Federation, the Shooting Federation of Canada, The Ontario Handgun Association and the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters. As a member of the competitive shooting fraternity and the holder of a valid hunting license, Szulga isn't impressed with the government's current strategy of trying to curtail the illegal use of firearms in the commission of a crime by imposing ever-stricter gun control legislation.

"A gun is one of the basic implements of history," she said. "The new regulations will make all kinds of people into criminals."

She added that the new laws are not addressing the problem of criminals using guns. "There aren't any simple answers to the complex problems, she admits."

But, like most shooters and hunters, she feels that more restrictive regulations will have no effect on the criminal element while imposing unnecessary red tape and expense on law-abiding and conscientious firearms users.

When Szulga isn't enjoying her chosen sport or working at her freelance management consulting job, she likes to spend some of her free time gardening or jigging for walleyes in her favourite spot on the Burnt River not far from her home.

Board wants lottery funds

Public meetings on budget

The public will be invited to ask school board members questions about the board's budget later this month.

The meetings will give the board a chance to defend its budget and provide an overview of the board's expenses. The board's budget was increased 4.9 per cent this year as declining provincial funds forced the board to increase taxpayers share. The average taxpayer would have to pay an extra $60 per year.

There was some debate about the locations of the meetings, but it was decided to hold the meetings in the County's two largest population centres.

The first meeting will be held June 11, 7:30 p.m. at Archie Stouffer Elementary School and the second June 17, 7:30 p.m. at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School.

Board wants lottery funds

The board passed a resolution urging the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation to allow school boards access to funds from the Provincial Lotteries Corporation.

The same resolution was first passed by the West Parry Sound Board of Education in early April and a copy of it was sent to the minister of Tourism and Recreation, Peter North, along with a letter explaining the board's actions.

The letter stated there would have to be strict criteria governing the use of the funds, but did not reveal what they might be.

An ad hoc committee has been established to handle any emergency that may arise with the addition to Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

The committee was to originally consist of the chairperson (more on page 13) and vice-chairperson of the board, the chairperson of the management committee, the business administrator, but concern was expressed that at least one member should be from the Minden area. Trustee Cheryl Murdoch was then voted as the fifth person of the committee. The vice-chairperson of the board, Wally Bunn, is also from the Minden area.

Board by-laws passed

Haliburton County Board of Education passed a set of by-laws which will govern how the board will act.

The only discussion centered on whether or not a trustee has the right to abstain from voting on a particular issue. Trustee Wayne Wood asked "is it not the right to not vote?"

The matter was resolved when it was made clear that a trustee would be exempt from voting only if there was a conflict of interest or were excused from voting by the board.

Committee meetings changed

Haliburton County school board committees have changed their meeting schedules to allow time for its various minutes and resolutions to be typed up and in the hands of board members well in advance of the board meeting at the end of the month.

Starting this month, the education committee will hold its monthly meeting on the first Tuesday of each month and the special education advisory committee will meet the following day. The second Tuesday of each month will have the management committee and the human resources will have its meeting the following Thursday.

Computer modem blow-up

Business Administrator Jim Bradley told the board that last Sunday's storm caused the modem between Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and the board's office to break down. Its replacement cost will be in the neighborhood of $3000.

While the board does carry insurance on its equipment, it also carries depreciation to lower the insurance payments. The actual value of the outdated modem is not much more than the insurance deductible which is $250.

Bradley also informed the board he was looking into a program to allow school board employees and members to buy computer equipment at discounted prices.

Bradley told the board many other school boards have the system in place. The only costs to the board would be in managing the list. Employees could pay for the computers through a payroll deduction plan.

Fund raising requests passed

Cardiff will be selling an odd collection of small fire extinguishers, decorative candles and date books to raise funds for the school. No date was announced.

Wilberforce chose the date of September 18 to hold its fair.

Obsolete equipment to be sold

The school board passed a resolution that its management committee develop a policy to dispose of obsolete and surplus equipment and furniture.

The program would allow other schools to have first choice of the equipment before it was offered to the public.

Haliburton soccer team drops out of Muskoka league

by Andy Holloway

Don't look for Haliburton's Muskoka District soccer team on any kind of regular basis this summer.

Manager Chris Carl says there just are not enough warm and able bodies to fill out the team, who were known as Westside Jug City last year, to play in the Muskoka league.

"There just wasn't enough interest in getting the team going. We got together and decided we didn't have the nucleus for a good team," says Carl.

Carl says many players could not commit for a full season due to injuries, families and other summer plans.

Last year's manager and goalkeeper Brian Moore could not commit to a full season this year because of his poor knees and a lack of time. Moore says the main problem is the "team is aging" and the younger guys are working so they can go to university.

One of the players the team had last year was 54-years-old and Moore says while he kept up with the younger guys, the team thought they would have to carry him off on a stretcher at the end of the game.

"In my case, my position requires a lot of agility and the knees just aren't giving it to me anymore," says Moore.

The team is definitely not folding due to a lack of good results. Over the last five years the team compiled a .700 winning percentage. Last year the team finished tied for third place in the nine team Muskoka district, but often did not have any substitutes to replace tiring players.

"We've always had a good team and the guys who came to play really came to play so that was nice," says Moore.

There are not many tournaments that the team is suited for, because of the players ages and the fact it is a recreational team and not semi-professional. Carl says planning for tournaments is also difficult because the players do not know in advance when they can play.

However, the team should be able to play some "friendlies" this year with teams from the Muskoka District, like Huntsville or Bracebridge, senior club teams from Toronto and the occasional game against Haliburton Highlands Secondary School's senior soccer team. For example, on Sunday the team met with several of the Redmen soccer players and played a seven on seven game.

Carl wants the games to be a "casual affair" and play just for the fun of the game. He also wants to keep the younger kids involved with the team to keep interest up.

Moore says he hopes the team's demise does not diminish interest in soccer and is hopeful the team can play in the future with a new core of younger players.

"The great thing about our league was you could play against these teams and you would really want to beat them, but afterwards you could sit down for a beer with them and have no problems."

Members of Minden's karate club team show the medals they won at a tournament in Geraldton. Clockwise from top left: Robert Cave, Bonnie Macquarie, Marc Cave and Tauri Caputo.

Kick it out

by Andy Holloway

Minden's karate club grabbed a fistful of medals when it travelled to Geraldton for a tournament last Sunday.

Five members from the Minden-Victoria Shotokan Karate club won a total of seven medals, six of them golds, in the Northwest Grand-Prix Tournament.

Bonnie Macquarie and Robert Cave led the onslaught as they each captured a pair of gold medals. Both won the Kumite and Kata events in their respective divisions.

Not to be outdone, Marc Cave also finished first in the Kumite and Tauri Caputo grabbed the gold medal in the Kata event. Caputo also finished fourth in the Kumite.

Finally, Chris Holliday Rhodes took a bronze medal in the Kata.

Hustlers default game

by Andy Holloway

The Minden Rockcliffe Hustlers had an up and down week in Tri-County fastball play.

On Wednesday, the Hustlers edged the highly ranked Fenelon Falls team 2-1. But, the following night, the Hustlers had to default to Bobcaygeon because of a lack of players. The Hustlers are now 2-1 on the season and tied with Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon for top spot.

Manager Dave Dollo said the team was missing three players on Thursday and on a team with only 11 players to start with that's one too many. Dollo said two of the players were in Kingston to catch the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School track team in action. Hustler Tim Davies is one of the coaches of the Redmen. A third player was out of town.

However, on Wednesday the team had its full complement of players and won a very tight game against Fenelon Falls. Dollo was much happier with the team's play than he was last week when the Hustlers beat Lindsay and called it a "good team effort."

"We had a good defence and good pitching. I know that sounds like a cliché, but sometimes it's true," said Dollo.

Brian Shaw led the way pitching the full seven innings for his first win of the year. Andrew Burk had two hits and an RBI to propel the offense.

Burk now has three RBIs on the season to lead the Hustlers in that department.

In a couple of schedule changes, Bobcaygeon will now be the Hustlers next opponent at home this Thursday replacing Fenelon Falls who will now meet the Hustlers on July 23.

Log homes break through the R-2000 barrier

The Haliburton Highlands is fortunate to have a number of contractors who are qualified to build, and to have successfully built an R-2000 home. The latest to be added to the list is Highland Homes. However, while other builders have relied on conventional building techniques, Highland Homes has achieved this special distinction using logs.

Barry Butler, the owner of Highland Homes, is a dealer for Pan-Abode International Ltd., a long-time manufacturer of pre-fabricated log homes. (Highland Homes is an exhibitor at the Haliburton Home and Vacation Show).

The R-2000 standard was established in the province by Ontario Hydro after seeing the success of the idea in Alberta. The program establishes a stringent set of guidelines for home construction which is aimed at the reduction of energy use in home heating.

The impetus behind the program was based on the fact that Canadians are the greatest per capita consumers of energy in the world, and the largest portion of that amount is in home heating.

When the standard was first established it was felt that log homes would likely not qualify because of the nature of the construction methods and material. Butler, who has been in the log home business for more than 12 years, realized the potential benefits of the R-2000 program, but saw the exclusion of log structures as a challenge to be overcome. He first attended the seminars which explained the requirements needed to build an R-2000 home, then set about adapting those to his product.

An R-2000 home must meet an over-all insulation factor of R-21. The red cedar logs used in the Pan-Abode homes are rated at R-6.25. Butler felt he could use the Pan-Abode product as a base and extend it to meet this super standard.

When an order came in from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, for a new home on the Kennisis Lake Road, Butler and the owners agreed they wanted the new standard.

Naturally, building a home with higher insulation value costs more. It was estimated that upgrading the Smith home to R-2000 would add $6,000 to the cost of the three bedroom Redmond model home chosen from the company catalogue.

Despite the additional cost, the payback from an R-2000 home is immediate and long-term.

A home which passes the R-2000 test after it is built, qualifies for a $2000 grant and, of course, returns savings in annual energy consumption. It has been estimated that the additional expense invested in the Smith home will be returned within three years. The home also has a higher re-sale value because of the R-2000 rating, a payback that will become more valuable as the cost of home heating increases.

The secret to increasing the R value of the Pan-Abode home was the application of more than a generous amount of insulation on the interior of the structure, using Roxul insulation (a by-product from the steel industry which exceeds the insulating factor of other conventional products by 10 to 15%). The roof includes nine inches of Roxul while the interior framed walls have six inches of the insulation. The entire structure is encased in a poly vapour barrier, a key element in stopping air infiltration. To maintain the log look on the inside, the insulated walls are covered with 3/4 inch tongue and groove cedar.

The house was built last fall and after undergoing the final test, was certified as an R-2000 home, demonstrating that indeed log structures can, with appropriate modifications, qualify for the new standard. And, for Butler, it proved that his style of building need not be left out in the cold.

Heating in the Winter. Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

Flight of spring is for the birds

With the return of spring comes the return of many migratory species from the south for another year of nesting. To ensure their nesting habitat is protected, inventories have been conducted on their traditional nesting locations.

"We have been concentrating on species that are sensitive to habitat alteration or destruction that are generally the result of logging operations," says Tim Haxton, biologist with the Ministry of Natural Resources. "These include herons, osprey and red-shouldered hawks."

The Great Blue Heron can be commonly observed flying overhead, or stalking prey in wetlands and in shallow areas of lakes and rivers in the Haliburton Highlands. They feast primarily on fish, however they will consume amphibians, reptiles, insects, crayfish and small mammals.

In early April, herons return to the nesting areas. They are colonial nesters, constructing large stick nests on the tops of dead or live trees within ponds, wetlands or along the edges of lakes. The number of nests in a heron colony may vary from a couple to forty or fifty.

In previous years, the Ministry of Natural Resources has been conducting surveys from a helicopter to locate and document the location, size and status of heronries within the Minden area.

"Our most recent survey was conducted in early June 1991. We surveyed 90 heronries and determined 71 to display some signs of activity. The colonies displayed different stages of development with generally two to four offspring per nest, from the incubation stage, through to fully feathered young in nests. These different stages were observed even amongst the same colony," Haxton said.

Heronries are very susceptible to disturbance during the nesting period which is usually from early April through to mid-August. Disturbance may lead to the abandonment of the colony. Such a case was known several years ago where the young were found dead, hanging from their nests. It was believed that aircraft landing in the vicinity of these nests may have caused the problem in this case. The heronry eventually recolonized, but took several years. Signs have now been posted at this heronry to prevent further disturbance.

Desertion of the colony may also occur if there is alteration or destruction of habitat. The Ministry of Natural Resources has established internal guidelines for activities conducted in the vicinity of a heronry. During the sensitive nesting period, the Ministry conducts no work within a one kilometre radius of the colony. In addition, a 300 metre buffer zone is placed around each heronry in which no alteration of habitat may take place at any time. These guidelines are enacted to ensure the perpetuation of the colony.

Like herons, they nest in large stick nests located on tops of dead trees in the middle of ponds, however, they have also been observed to nest on the top of hydro poles or even an old windmill. The number of ospreys was noted to be declining in the early 1900's, attributed mainly to the Great Hawk

Ospreys and hawks make their way north

Hunts carried out in Pennsylvania, and continued to decline in the 1950's and 1960's after the advent of DDT in the late 40's. At one time, osprey were considered to be endangered in Canada, however, populations rebounded in the early 1980's and have been increasing ever since. This also appears to be the situation in the Minden area. "We know of 31 osprey nests within the district but suspect there are many more," states Haxton.

Osprey pair for life and have a high fidelity to nesting locations. They nest in mid to late April and generally raise two to three offspring. The young fledge 52-53 days after hatching but remain in the vicinity of the nest for some time. Osprey mature at 3-6 years and may have a life expectancy of 15-20 years. The M.N.R. has been documenting the location of osprey nests in conjunction with the heronry survey.

Guidelines have also been established for Ministry work around osprey nests. A buffer of 200 metres is placed around each nest in which no work may take place, and an additional 600 metre zone in which only minimal work may be conducted, but not during the nesting period.

Red-shouldered hawks, very secretive birds, are not usually as visible as osprey or herons, using the enclosure of hardwood canopy cover to hunt. Red-shouldered hawks were once the most common raptor in Ontario during the 1800's, but due to the clearing of land for agricultural purposes, and forest fragmentation, the numbers have declined such that they are now considered rare.

Red-shouldered hawks require continuous tracts of mature hardwood forests. Surveys have also been conducted for red-shouldered hawk nesting areas within allocated timber stands. These surveys involve cruising timber stands by foot and broadcasting a red-shouldered hawk call.

"Red-shouldered hawks are very territorial and will respond to the taped broadcast if nesting nearby," explains Haxton, "however, they generally only respond during the pre-incubation period."

Once an active nest is located in an allocated stand, a 7 hectare no-cut reserve is placed immediately around the nest, along with a 21 hectare modified management area around the no-cut reserve in which only a selection cut may take place. These guidelines are currently being reviewed by monitoring active nests in co-operation with the Technology Development Unit in North Bay. In 1991, there were five active nests that produced 2-3 chicks per nest in the Minden area.

"If you come across a heronry, an osprey nest, a red-shouldered hawk nest or any bird nesting, do not disturb them. Observe them from a distance with binoculars and leave the area if they appear agitated," says Haxton. "This will facilitate the success of producing offspring."

For further information, or for reporting a possible nesting location, contact the Ministry of Natural Resources, (705) 286-1521.

Walking the dog

Joan Bunn led about 40 people and their dogs on the Canine Walk which wound its way through Minden last Sunday. The walk raised $6,700 for the Hyland Crest Senior's Home's Tub Fund.
